Introduction

You work for a publishing company and have been asked to research the different types of folklore for a new book to help teachers teach the different types of folklore children. Using the information you find through the websites provided, you will fill out the Folklore Identification Chart and find out the differences between the different types of folklore. For instance, how are fables different from fairy tales? How are legends different from tall tales? Throughout this unit you will work to answer the following ESSENTIAL QUESTIONS: Why is folklore important? Why are stories pasted down from generation to generation? How are folktales more than just stories?

Tasks

You and a partner will visit all of the websites provided and work to find the definitions and characteristics of all the different types of folklore and record them on the Folklore Identification Chart. You will also read examples and watch short video clips of the different types of folklore. You will be focusing on the following types of folklore: Fables, Fairy tales, Myths, Tall tales, Legends.

Process

1. Obtain a copy of the Folklore Identification Chart. A printable version is attached below.
2. Click on all the WebQuest tabs and read all directions before beginning.
3. Visit websites under the heading "Folklore Information and Examples" below and find definitions for all the different types of folklore.
4. Fill in Folklore Identification Chart definitions.
5. Visit websites below and read or watch examples of all the different types of folklore and fill in the Folklore Identification Chart examples.
6. Make sure to document each folktale you read or watch on the Folklore Identification Chart!
