Freedom today is bigger than ever, from the way people dress to the way they live their lives. In the story On the Road by Jack Kerouac, there is a sense of freedom in how the main character Sal lives and roams about freely. Try to relate your life to Sal's, and see if there's any commons, or any uncommon things. This piece of literature was written in a different time period and people still live as Sal once did. This is your chance to compare and contrast your life to another's.

You are to do this without any partners, this will make it easier to relate to your own life without much distraction.

In a short essay write your feelings toward Sal's lifestyle. You have to be for it or against it.
Rewrite the ending, give the story your own little flair to the end.
Now for this part you are going to have to show your artistic capabilities. Draw a map of Sal's trip through your own eyes, don't worry not everyone can draw. artwork won't be graded, your creativeness will be.
Next, envision yourself as Sal, write a short journal entry of the trip. Write it as if you were Sal.
Write an account of a road trip, whether it be real or made up.
Be prepared to give an oral presentation.

All students will be supplied with a copy of the book. They have two weeks to complete it, all students will be held responsible for their own completion of the book. Upon completion students will return books and begin work on their assignments. Assignments will be done as stated.

Students will be graded on neatness and creativity. Also, students will be expected to analyze the book. Lastly, students will be graded on their oral presentation, clarity, posture, etc. I'll give final grade to students.

Upon completion of this Webquest, students should have acquired a better understanding of the book, and it's ways of showing personal freedoms. Also students should gain knowledge of having individual freedoms.
